Music history up for sale

A store made famous by a Peter Allen song, that was a tribute to his saddler grandfather, has been put on the market by the family of its long-term owners.

The 153-year-old Tenterfield Saddler in the small New England town in NSW's northwest near the Queensland border still occupies the original heritage-listed blue granite, tin-roofed building on High St.

Music aficionados flock to Tenterfield to see the venue that was immortalised in Allen's 1972 song The Tenterfield Saddler.

The song is a tribute to Allen's grandfather George Woolnough, who ran the saddlery from 1908 until his retirement in 1960.

The sale includes the shopfront property on 705sq m of land and stock in the store.
